PRESENTATION

With a productive cycle of more than 25 years and an arboreal structure, oil palm crops offer favorable conditions to harbor a variety of wildlife species. Moreover, several plant and animal species render environmental services to the crop, including legumes which fix nitrogen, maintain relative humidity and control soil erosion; nectariferous plants that attract pollinators and organisms that control pests and diseases; birds, insects, amphibians and reptiles which help build the soil; and plants that help maintain river banks, preventing erosion and sedimentation, and protecting crops against flooding.

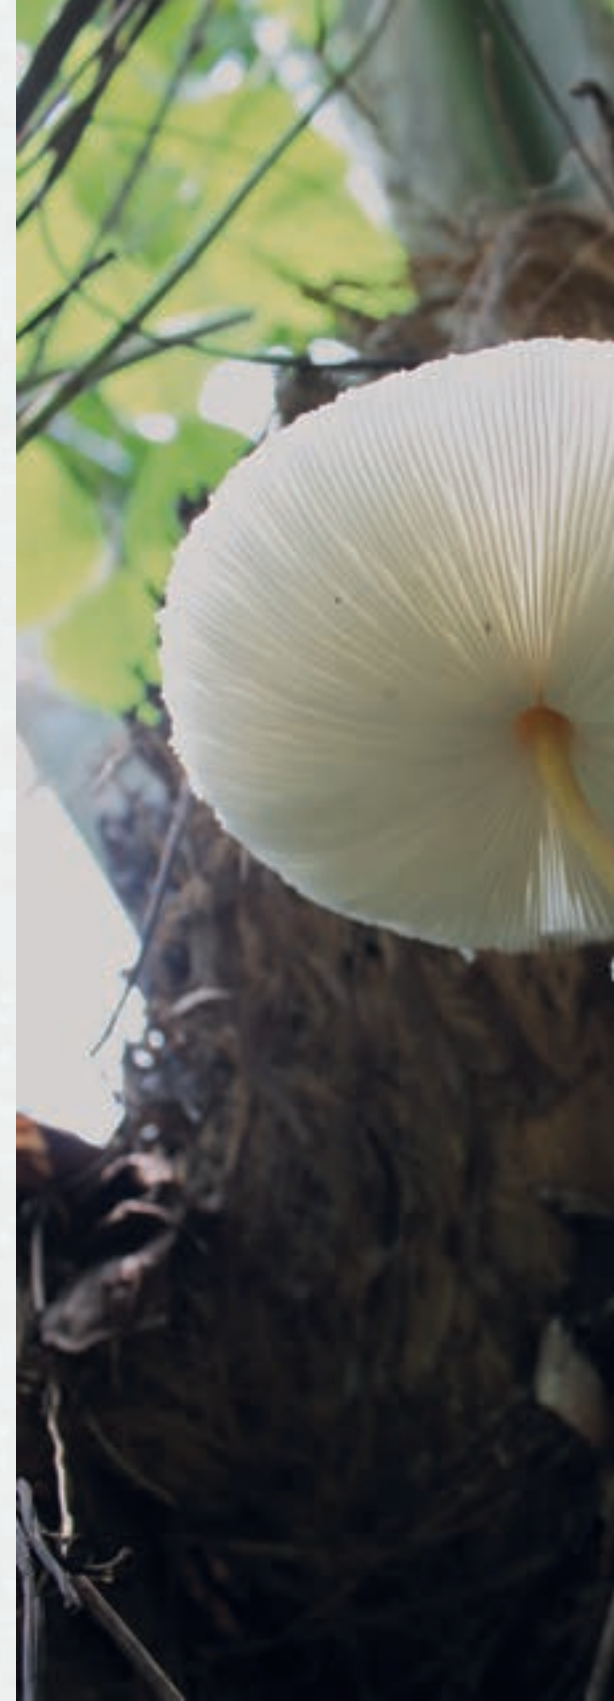

On the other hand, oil palm crops in Colombia directly benefit more than 6,000 producers and create over 70,000 jobs, resulting in a positive impact for thousands of families living in the four oil palm growing zones of the country.

The human and environmental dimensions of this agribusiness are plentiful in life, color and stories to tell and share. This is what the National Environmental and Social Photography contest in Oil Palm Zones of Colombia is all about.

The contest was born in 2009 from an initiative by Miguel Ángel Mazorra Valderrama, who led Fedepalma's Environmental Area between 2000 and 2010. Miguel Ángel was passionate about photography and would always bring his camera along as he traveled across the country, visiting oil palm crops. His photographs became regular features of the Federation's publications and presentations, offering insights into the wealth of wildlife species that mingle with oil palm, and into the permanent interactions between oil palm systems and their natural surroundings. His vision was to move others to capture that same biodiversity with their lenses and delight other people with their photographs.

For us at Fedepalma it is a source of great joy to present this book that celebrates the first ten editions of the contest. With it, we pay tribute to the memory of Miguel Ángel Mazorra Valderrama, who would have greatly enjoyed seeing all the inspiration spurred by his legacy. Recognition also goes to Tatiana Pretelt de la Espriella, who worked by his side to make sure this idea became a reality, and to Juan Carlos Espinosa Camacho, trustee of the last eight editions of the contest. Under his leadership, this initiative has crystallized into a showcase of the human and environmental wealth of oil palm activity in Colombia.

JENS MESA DISHINGTON
Executive President of Fedepalma

INTRODUCTION

The National Environmental and Social Photography contest in Oil Palm Zones of Colombia is an opportunity to harness the art of photography to portray the way in which the palm oil agroindustry in Colombia has developed with social and environmental criteria; preserving natural resources, protecting biodiversity, and creating rural jobs that contribute to the economic growth of communities in oil palm growing regions.

In the initial two editions in 2009 and 2010, the contest included one single environmental category aimed at highlighting:

- Wildlife species and natural ecosystems found in or around oil palm plantations.
- The endeavors of oil palm growers and other inhabitants of the oil palm zones to protect the environment and ensure the sustainable use of natural resources in their regions.
- The adoption of good environmental management practices in oil palm plantations and mills.

After a hiatus in 2011, the contest revived again in 2012 incorporating the social category, designed to show:

- Aspects of daily family and community life and job activities of oil palm agribusiness workers in Colombia.
- Corporate social responsibility initiatives that have created a positive impact in oil palm regions.
- The adoption of good occupational health and safety practices in accordance with the current legislation.

First, second and third places in each category received awards in each edition. Experts in environmental and social matters and connoisseurs of the art of photography were selected as independent juries. On occasions, the jury also granted honorable mentions in one or both categories.

Over the course of these ten editions, 356 participants have shown their work in 1,337 photographs. This book features the 54 winning photos and another 65 which have received honorable mentions to date. The remainder are part of Fedepalma's institutional repository and may be found in the Oil Palm Information and Documentation Center - CID Palmero.

We hope you enjoy this outstanding collection.

JUAN CARLOS ESPINOSA CAMACHO
Environmental Leader of Fedepalma

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

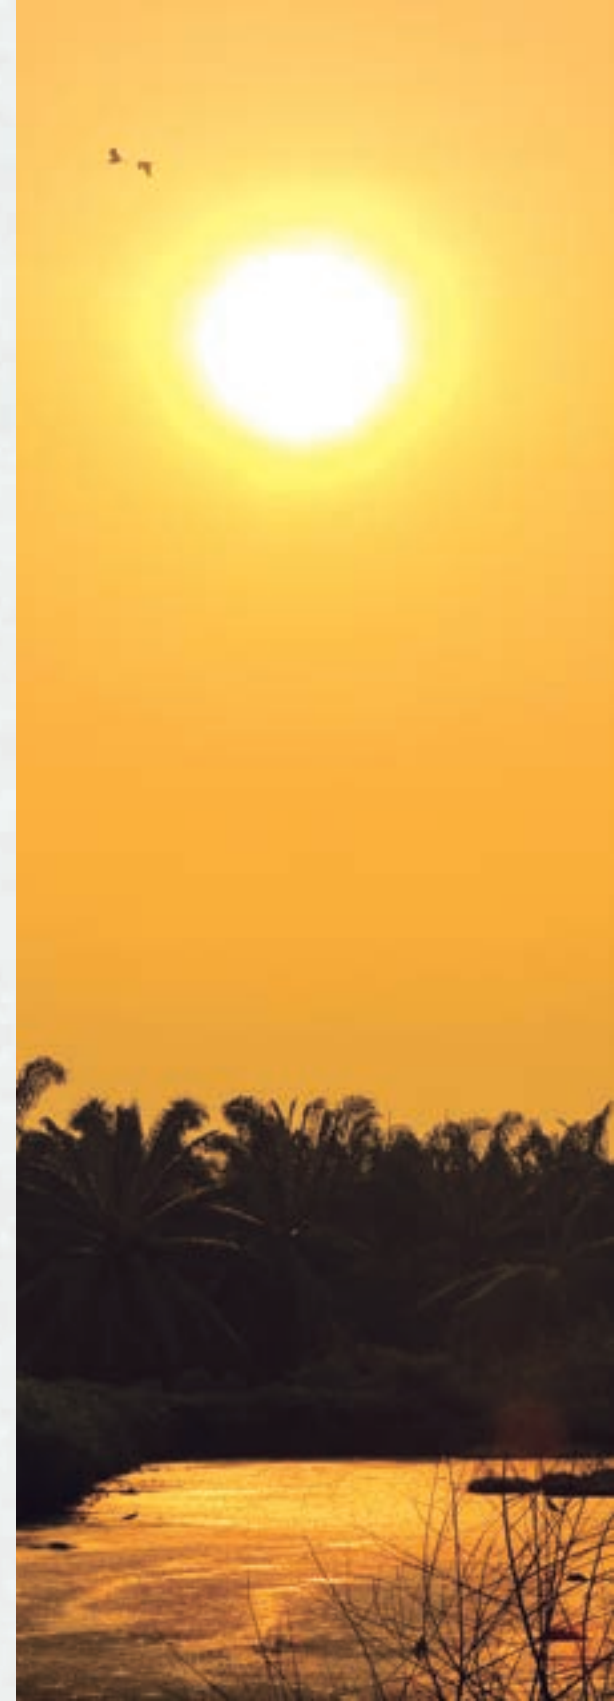

Many people have been involved in the design, materialization and evolution of this contest, and they deserve special thanks in this commemorative publication of its first ten editions.

First and foremost, a tribute to Miguel Ángel Mazorra Valderrama, who conceived the idea of this contest. In the Environmental Area of Fedepalma we have continued with his legacy and every year we get very excited to launch a new edition, look at the participating photographs and reward the winners. Laura Mantilla, Katherin Ibarra, Julián Cifuentes, Raquel Vélez and Gustavo Gómez have been the true architects of each of these editions and, together with the invaluable support of Diana Parra and Rocío Sarmiento, have made sure that every detail is in place.

Our gratitude to each of the 356 participants who have excitedly and expectantly shared their photographs. We hope that they will continue to be part of this tradition with more and better images for our future editions. Our deep-felt gratitude goes also to the juries who have carefully selected awesome photographs. It has been most enriching to witness your deliberations as you explore the details of color, light and composition and the message behind every winning photograph.

Since its third edition, this contest has been developed together with the Social Area of Fedepalma. Andrés Castro, Myriam Martínez and María Rueda also deserve recognition because this publication is a shared achievement. Our appreciation also to Willy Arroyo and Felipe Daza.

The staff in the Communications Area of Fedepalma also needs to be recognized as our best partners over all these years, positioning the contest under the media spotlight in order to ensure the success of the awards ceremony. Tatiana Pretelt (coinspirer with Miguel Mazorra for the creation of the contest), Claudia Muñoz, Nasly Salcedo and, again, Tatiana Pretelt, have been at the forefront of this joint endeavor; Lourdes Molina has provided valuable support with the media and with suggestions for the jury; and Yolanda Moreno, Esteban Mantilla, Andrés Muñoz and Jenny Ramírez have been key players in editing, layout and publication of multiple printed and digital pieces. We have also received wholehearted support from Carolina Guzmán, Nataly Serna, Cindy Rodríguez and Patricia Parrado from the Events Area to make the awards ceremony a magical and special experience every year.

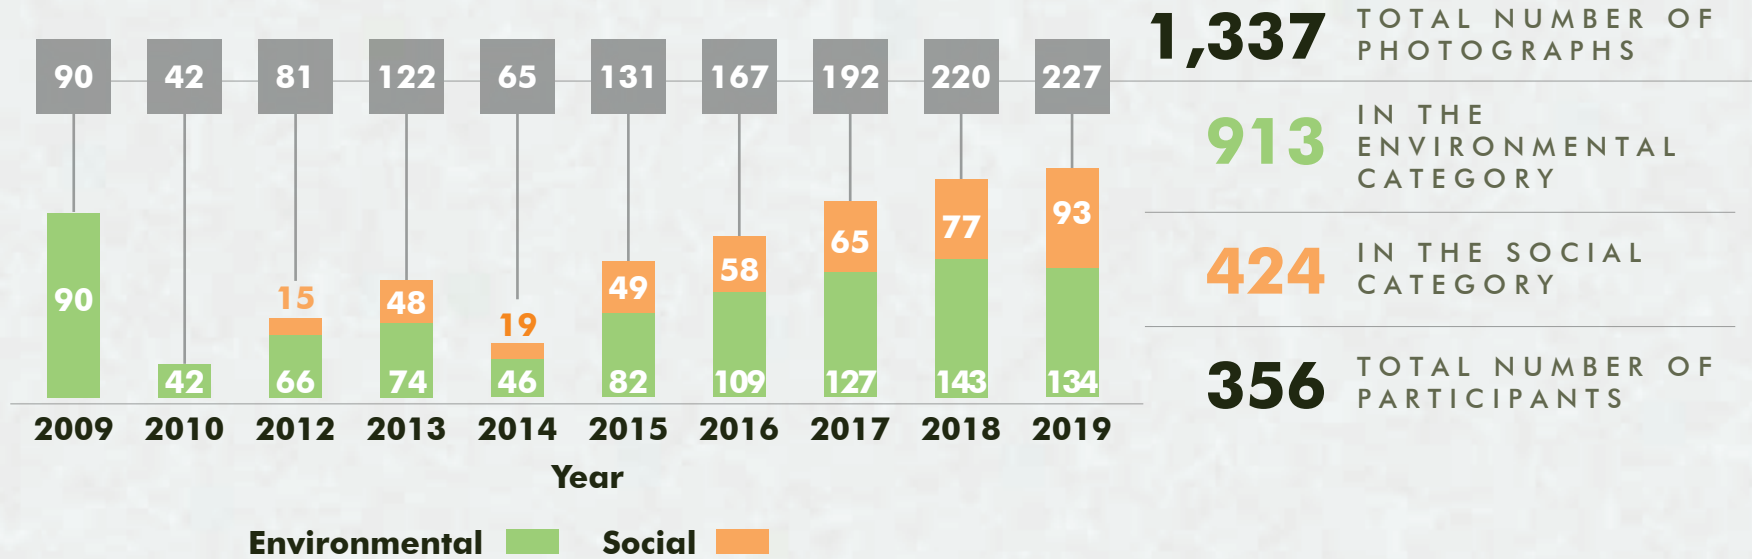

Martha Arango, Giovanni Cortés and Diana Piñeros, thank you for keeping and exhibiting the entire collection of the contest photographs in the facilities of the Oil Palm Information and Documentation Center in Bogotá. Many thanks to Alcibiades Hincapié for his support in shortlisting the eligible photographs, and to all the Extension team in Cenipalma for publicizing the contest throughout the oil palm regions.

Our appreciation goes also to the Directors of Sectoral Planning and Sustainable Development of Fedepalma: Álvaro Silva, Ricardo Torres, Andrea González and Andrés Felipe García, because it has been under their leadership that this initiative has gained momentum over the years. A very special thanks to Jens Mesa Dishington, Executive President of Fedepalma, for his support to this initiative from the very beginning, his conviction to leverage it every year, and for coming up with the idea of this beautiful memorial collection.

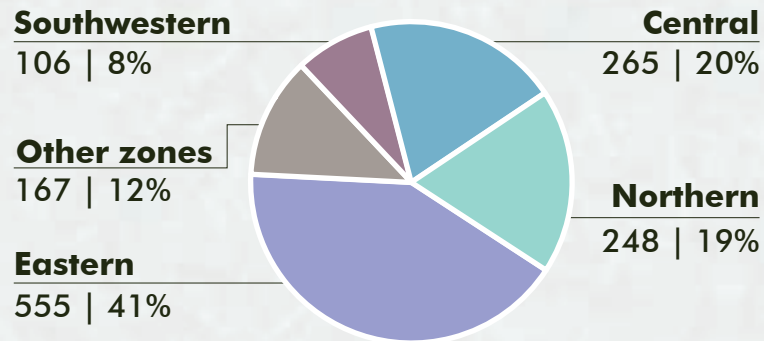

Finally, to the Oil Palm Development Fund for funding the ten editions of this contest so far.
